Gentlemen:
Ayer's Hair Vigor

Has been used in my household for three seasons:—

1st. To prevent falling out of the hair.
2d. To prevent too rapid change of color.
3d. As a dressing.

It has given entire satisfaction in every instance. Yours respectfully,
WM. CAREY CRANE."

AYER'S HAIR VIGOR is entirely free from uncleanly, dangerous, or injurious substances. It prevents the hair from turning gray, restores gray hair to its original color, prevents baldness, preserves the hair and promotes its growth, cures dandruff and all diseases of the hair and scalp, and is, at the same time, a very superior and desirable dressing.

The Lover's Sweetest Music.

Sweet are the carols of feathered throats
When the day has opened its eye;
Sweet, O sweet are the tremulous notes
Of the young mother's lullaby.

Sweet to the lover when the night comes down,
As he stands in the shadows dim,
Is the rustling faint of his lady's gown
As she comes down the lane to him.

But a sweeter music to him than this—
Oh! the sweetest under the sun—
Is the low faint tone of the maiden's "yes"
Which tells that her heart is won.

The Maiden's Suitors.

Suitor No. 1.

Sweet maiden with the face so fair
And eyes that like the diamonds shine,
Bright maiden with the queenly air,
Once more I ask, wilt thou be mine?

Oh, give consent and be my wife,
Some pity kindly show to me;
I love thee better than my life,
And cheerfully would die for thee.

The Maiden.

Oh, do not tease me now I pray;
Talk love to me some other day.

Suitor No. 2.

The reason why I've called to-day
Is this—er—well, upon my life,
I scarcely know just what to say—
And—er—well, will you be my wife?

You'll never know life's cares or ills,
In silks and jewels you shall shine,
I'll foot your millinery bills,
And—well, in brief, will you be mine?

The Maiden.

This is so sudden! But—oh, la!
I think you'd better speak to pa.

AUBURN, Cal., 1885.

The old gold fever seems to still in-fuse some of the citizens of California.

A few Sundays ago men might have been seen traveling our thoroughfares with their heads downcast, as if in deep thought; their eyes distended and their steps languid—their whole man-ner one of philosophical bearing, and which might have led a stranger to think he had been translocated, and was an inhabitant of Greece dur-ing the sixth century before Christ, and an associate of the Seven Wise Men of that period. But by close ob-servation such momentary hallucina-tions were dispelled. It has long been a custom among those who desire spec-imens, those who hope to earn a "bit," and those who enjoy the mild excite-ment of searching for gold, to turn out after a heavy rain, and look for the precious metal. Young, old, green-horns and "experts" flocked and sought, some even went so far as to turn out their chickens in the not altogether vain hope of realizing something by dissecting their craws. Even I de-scended from my usual dignity and high position as editor of the leading fashion weekly and farming journal of the Pacific coast to seek the stuff that is the base of the root of all evil and the cause of my discontent, (because I have not enough). We were jeered and sneered at, and it was a "silly-looking" brigade as we strode into the mud, knee-deep, through the drizzling rain.

And tho' our ranks were disjoined
Thro' the remarks pointed
By the vulgar,
We were not at all daunted,
Nor yet even haunted,
With despair.

And the revenge of the taunted
Was great, as they flouted
Their gold everywhere.

The largest piece picked up was worth about $350.

'Tis too late to meditate,
Once you're on the roller skate;
And, if you are a bit disreputable,
You'll let them be on others' feet.

Our own experience is so sad,
Advising others makes us glad.

The other day the reading class in the primary department of the public school had for their lesson a letter, written by a juvenile, named Smith, who was spending his vacation away from home, to his father. In it he said he was having a good time, etc., and after signing his name, wrote: "P. S.—Please send me a gun." The teacher asked the class if any knew what "P. S." meant, and one red-headed urchin bopped up serenely with the answer: "Pap Smith."

POETRY BY L. A. BURDETTE.

Last night a tom-cat, strong and bold,
Sat beneath my bed-room window,
And sang me a song, sung oft of old,
In the feline's familiar lingo.

I sought to show my appreciation,
By letting him know that I was about;
I stormed and I roared at the cat creation,
But couldn't root him out.

At last a thought came to my mind,
Instead of the oft used boot-jack,
I cautiously unloosed my window-blind,
And dropped it on his back.

Mr. Editor, I think I ought to ex-plain a sentence of mine in that ex-tremely witty portion of this effusion relating to hunting gold, wherein I inadvertently and unostentatiously al-luded to my connection with the "lead-ing fashion weekly and farming jour-nal of the Pacific coast" as his chief "clippings," and state wherein it leads. The chief production of this section, at present, is sage-brush and chapparal, and the object of the intelligent prop-rietary of the heretofore alluded to journal is to see that the products above mentioned are properly "razed" and something more nutritious substituted.

Second—It is the fashion of the people of this coast to kick against the Chinese for living here, and the C. P. R. R. for not paying its taxes, and we are in the lead.

A boy at school the other day pasted bits of paper all over his face to make the other children laugh. The teacher reprimanded him and told him to go immediately and throw the paper in the stove. The boy proceeded down the aisle and when near the centre of the room turned around and solemnly inquired: "Miss M., must I take them off my face before I put them in?"

A young fellow in Auburn was es-corting a lady home from the rink the other evening. It was so dark they stumbled over a cow in the pathway, and when the gent recovered his equi-librium he put his arms around the cow's neck, through mistake, asked if she was hurt, and humbly begged her pardon. A fact.

SENTIMENTAL OLD AGE.

Whispering to the daffodowndillies,
Just peeping out the sod?

She—Often have I heard them,
In the dark and still night,
And in the fresh and early morn,
When all around was bright.

They oft recall the happy past,
That dear old long ago,
Before our lots in life were cast—
Ere turned our locks to snow.

He—But now were fading, Maude,
Slowly, but surely, turning gray—
We'll soon have to meet our God,
In that future far-away.

Then, no more shall we hear them
From 'neath the old oak tree,
That sheltered both our ancestors,
And now shades you and me.

Probably, you'll go first, Maude,
Maybe, 'twill be me;
Let us not think of that,
But simply wait and see;

And when our time does come,
And our Maker calls us hence,
His warm and open welcome,
Our trials will amply compensate.

I think I will have to give you readers something bitter now to make the foregoing lie well on their stomachs, and will wind up with the following advice to young men, who have "long-ings" for travel:

He who goes the way the wind blows,
In search of fortune and health,
Will find repose, the d—l knows,
In shed's commonwealth.

Crystal City.

Jefferson Watchman.

The old English tea party gotten up by the ladies of the Christian church, on Saturday last, proved a grand suc-cess. The entertainment was held in the City Hall, which was given the ladies of the Crystal City. The charge was beautifully decorated and under the brilliant rays of the electric light presented a charming appearance. The entertainment began with supper at 6 P. M. Seven tables arranged for eighteen guests each were set in the rear of the hall, each table being laden with good things for the "inner man," and beautifully decorated with flowers. The tables were presided over by Mes-dames P. A. Swink, R. M. Denholm, J. Williams, J. F. Nicholds, Reynolds, Hulse and J. B. Hamilton, who were assisted by Mesdames W. Kenner, Mc-Nutt, W. A. Gamel, J. B. Jones, S. J. Williams, Saffies and the Misses Ella Drake, Letha Bray, Annie Butler, Carrie Swink, Mary Mound, Lizzie Owen, Ida Reynolds, Prentiss Nutt, Anna Stabon, Ella McDaniels, Clifton Johnson, and several others whose names we were unable to obtain. The guests on leaving the tables took seats in the front of the hall, and the fresh arrivals occupied their positions at the festive board. At 8 o'clock the tables were cleared away and the concert be-gan, after 400 being served with sup-per. The first number of the program was an overture by the Crystal City Brass Band, under the leadership of Mr. S. J. Price, entitled, "Louisa and the Bird." The band also rendered a serenade, "Faithless and Sad," and a march, "Standard Bearer," which was all done in first-class style. The play-ing was quite a surprise to the audi-ence, and reflects great credit upon the leader, Mr. Price, whose training has brought it to such a state of perfection in so short a time.

Mr. John Burns, of St. Louis, delivered the opening address and put the audience in good humor with his wry remarks. Miss F. Jonneale Collins, of Des Arc, sang in the city for the first time, and her rendering of "Maid of Athens" and "Said My Heart" were received with prolonged applause. Mrs. M. A. Haskins sang "Orange Blossoms" and "Pretty Lips" in excellent style, and of course brought down the house. Her encore song was "Skating in the Rink." A vocal duet, "Beauti-ful Moonlight," by Misses Nettie and Minnie Collins was charmingly rendered and received the hearty plaudits of the audience. Miss Carrie Shelp, of St. Louis, gave two recitations, which created great amusement. Mr. G. E. Neale delivered an address full of good points and witty allusions, which kept the audience laughing from opening to close. Dr. Taylor's humorous address on "The Ladies" was a success. His remarks on the various characteristics of the fair sex, and their power over the gentlemen, excited the risible fac-ies of the entire audience. Mr. Rob-ert W. Edney sang "The Part Bowed Down" and "The Bellringer" in good style, the latter being particularly well rendered, and obtained a hearty encore.

"The Wolf" as given by Mr. W. W. Lester, received a unanimous applause. It is unnecessary to say that the concert solo by Mr. Price was good and was listened to with marked attention and thoroughly appreciated by all. The other numbers of the program were a cornet duet by Messrs. Pullin and Bag-gott, a violin solo by Mr. Pullin and a quartette, "Till We Meet Again," by Misses Nettie and Minnie Collins and Messrs. M. P. Elliott and John Stager. By request of the ladies, Mr. R. M. Denholm tendered their sincere thanks to all who had aided them in making this, the first Old English tea party, so great a success. Mr. Neale for the gratuitous use of the hall, and for his address; to Mr. John Burns and Dr. Taylor for their entertaining and in-structive speeches; to the Crystal City Brass Band and to the merchants and storekeepers for the use of the various articles loaned for the occasion. The unanimous verdict is that this is the most pleasant and successful entertain-ment ever given in Crystal City, and special request has been made to the ladies of the Christian church to make it an annual affair. NESTROUSE.

The Pursuit of the Chiricahuas.

Geronimo and his men have evideritly doubled in their course, and are now on the verge of the Colorado River. They are already beyond the border, and, unless scattering parties should be intercepted by the troops posted at Gaudale Canon, probably all will make good their escape. Lieut. Davis, who for a fortnight or so has been on their trail, was from twelve to twenty hours behind them at the last accounts, and while the fugitive In-dians were mounted, their nearest pur-suers were afoot.

The raid of Geronimo has been con-ducted with a skill as well as a feroc-ity not surpassed by the famous achieve-ments of Juh, Nana, or Victoria. Gen. Crook gives a list of several persons murdered by this band, and very like-ly there are other victims. The whole number of warriors who escaped was thirty-four, and they have been en-cumbered with three times as many women and children. They have shown all times great self-confidence, have raided as far north as the San Francisco valley, and have continued their marauding even to a range of sev-eral hundred miles before finally seek-ing refuge in Sonora. During this time twenty or thirty companies of infantry and cavalry have been either pursuing them or lying in wait for their capture. In addition three parties of Indian scouts, Capt. Smith with forty, Lieut. Davis with sixty, and Capt. Crawford with ninety, in all more than five times as many as the warriors of Geronimo, have hunted for them in vain.

The difficulties of overtaking or in-tercepting fugitive Indians in that re-gion are no doubt enormous. They be-gin by their strange methods of travel, and from time to time swoop down upon unprotected ranches. But if it is hard for the troops to leave the trav-elled roads and climb after the Indians in their mountainous retreats, the appar-ently the hired scouts should be equal to this sort of warfare. The services rendered thus far by the scouts have been disappointing. There are about two hundred of them, and many know by experience what the warpath is. But the energy of the Arizona Indians in hunting each other, under the leadership of white officers, is not always equal to that exhibited in robbing ranches and murdering settlers.

It may be a question whether some wiser system of distributing the troops cannot be devised than the one now employed. There are in the army two hundred and fifty companies of in-fantry, one hundred and twenty of cavalry, and sixty of artillery, a total of four hundred and thirty companies. The artillery has coastwise duty to perform, and would be of little use in field campaigning in Arizona; and for all three arms there are some impor-tant stations to garrison in thickly set-tled regions. Nevertheless, a force of three hundred and seventy companies of cavalry and infantry seems more than adequate to keep the Indians in order, if rightly distributed. Troops are permanently required in the neigh-borhood of all Indian reservations, in the Indian Territory, on the Canada border, and at the Northwest. Ariz-ona and New Mexico should have a specially powerful force always ready for movement. Just now the main hope of punishing Geronimo seems to rest in the hands of the Arizona In-dians, who, if they are properly given up, or in Gen. Crook's organizing an expedition to follow them to their retreat in the Sierra Madre.—N. Y. Sun.

He Stakes His Fate.

The uncommon bold wager made last week by the Hon. Billie Chandler at Concord, and recorded in presence of the Amoskeag Veterans, has not re-ceived all the attention it deserves.

Mr. Chandler assumed the appalling risk which he and John Roach are mainly responsible—namely, the Dolphin, the Boston, the Chicago, and the Atlanta—will prove successful in every re-spect, war vessels of which the country will be proud, and which will compare favorably with the best ships of any nation. "I am willing," he added, with deliberate and solemn emphasis, "to stake my fate on the result."

Chandler's fate is at present an un-known quantity, but certainly he could not have registered any more tremen-dous vow. Not merely his life, or his rep-utation, or his fortune, is the pledge which the ex-Secretary has placed at the mercy of future events over which he can exercise no direct control. He stakes his fate, which means the whole course of his existence from this time on, here and hereafter, on the success of the plans designed by Chandler's own Naval Advisory Board, on John Roach's disposition to keep faith with the Government, and on the same in-dividual's ability to build ships as good as any in the world.

How the Amoskeag veterans, hard-ened as many of them are, must have shuddered when they heard the awful wager!

The Hon. Billie Chandler's greater namesake, the late lamented Zache-riah, had a habit, as some of his sur-viving friends doubtless remember, of consigning his soul to everlasting per-dition on the slightest provocation and as a future contingent in matters of even a trifling importance. We got never heard of him as being venturesome enough to stake his fate on the sea-soning qualities of any of Roach's war ships.—N. Y. Sun.

A Sad Parting.

One of the revolutions of the politi-cal wheel of fortune brought to the sur-face the nomination of an successor to the Hon. S. B. Packard, United States consul at Liverpool. When it became known in that great emporium that Mr. Packard, who had been consul nearly seven years, had to go, a por-tentous and presentation were of course arranged in his honor. The affair took place May 23, and was a model of its kind. There were toasts and responses, and a handsome service of commerce, an illuminated address was presented to the retiring officer. The mayor made a speech that overflowed with good will towards America, and closed with a handsome service of commerce, an illuminated address was presented to the retiring officer. The mayor made a speech that overflowed with good will towards America, and closed with a handsome service of commerce, an illuminated address was presented to the retiring officer. The mayor made a speech that overflowed with good will towards America, and closed with a handsome service of commerce, an illuminated address was presented to the retiring officer.

It really seems almost a pity to break up such pleasant associations. Mr. Packard, however, had the requi-sitive philosophy. In making his ac-knowledgments he referred to the re-sult of last fall's election and said: "Myself and my friends, who are about to walk the plank, will gracefully hand over to our successors the archives which we hold, and the duties which we performed." Regard-ing the delicate and arduous nature of those duties he had also something to say, and after reading his remarks one is quite willing to believe that a United States consul at an important port really occupies a very responsible and laborious position. This impression is perhaps strengthened by the following dispatch from Mr. Bret Harte, United States consul at Glasgow, which was read to the assembled guests:

"I deeply regret that urgent work for the press prevents me from attend-ing the Packard banquet."

We have seen on our consular re-port from the pen of Mr. Harte. It was a mass of statistics regarding the industrial interests of Glasgow and its surrounding operatives. These statistics were ruthlessly assailed by some in-cipient political economists, who in-sinuated that Mr. Harte's figures didn't add up right, as though he was ap-plying the Poker Flat system of mathe-matics to problems of commerce and population. Taken in connection with the above dispatch, however, the re-port offered strong evidence tending to prove that Mr. Harte is hard at work for the press. The attention of Mr. Secretary Bayard is called to the fact that though Mr. Packard has been re-tired under the full blaze of an illumi-nated address, Mr. Harte is still so dili-gently working at his post that he has no time to go gadding about the country attending banquets.—Republican.
